

PROCLAMATION

“National Parental Involvement Day”

November 17, 2011

WHEREAS, the community of Carson City realizes that the future depends on today's youth who will become tomorrow's leaders; and

WHEREAS, creating a sound education platform is the key to producing the next generation of conscientious, innovative, productive and successful citizens; and

WHEREAS, research indicates that students who have involved families get higher grades, have fewer discipline problems, and are more likely to be successful throughout their entire lives; and

WHEREAS, it is important to create an environment where learning takes place not just in the classroom but becomes a central part of family life where parents and all members of our community plan an active role in our children's education; and

WHEREAS, the community of Carson City supports the goals of National Parental Involvement Day and recognizes that when parents and members of our community work together for the common purpose of educating our youth that our children are more likely to succeed not only in school but in all aspects of their lives.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Robert L. Crowell, Mayor of Carson City, Nevada, do hereby proclaim Thursday, the 17th of November, as “National Parental Involvement Day” and urge the citizens of our community to work toward the common purpose of creating a platform of success for our children.

Dated this 17th day of November 2011

Robert L. Crowell, Mayor
